

MIDDLE SCHOOL

MANAGING INTENSE EMOTIONS

Skill Sheet for Educators

It is not uncommon for middle schoolers to experience their emotions very intensely. As highlighted in the video, when emotions become intense, there is often an urge to do something connected with that feeling. Sometimes the urge might be to do something that ultimately makes them continue feeling overwhelmed or makes their problems bigger.

It's important for middle schoolers to know that intense emotions and the urges that come with them are common and they do not last forever. Adolescents can ride out intense feelings and urges by utilizing their five senses and different activities to ground them in the present and help them tolerate how they feel. Waiting for the intensity to pass also allows for greater control in choosing what they do next.

Summary of the KEY POINTS from the video.

- Everyone feels big and intense emotions sometimes.
- Everyone has urges that are caused by big, intense emotions. The key is riding out the urge until the feelings have lessened.
- Middle schoolers can ride the wave by utilizing their five senses (sight, sound, taste, touch, smell) and by engaging in healthy distracting activities and being active (e.g., taking a walk, talking with friends, reading, journaling).

Practice Skills

- Validate emotions! Show that you're listening to your students and that you empathize with how they feel. This helps them feel understood.
- Provide space and opportunity for students to calm down in your classroom or in the school. This can include space that provides self-soothing materials like calming pictures to look at, stress balls, and other materials that help students utilize their five senses.
- Have an understanding that students can journal or color or do other quiet activities in the classroom if they need to calm down.
- Include visuals around your classroom that reference healthy ways to tolerate intense emotions.

- Notice and provide positive feedback for students' efforts in utilizing healthy strategies to ride out intense emotions.
- Lastly, model opportunities when you utilize healthy strategies to tolerate intense emotions.

- Practice those validation skills! As an educator, when you feel the pull to help your students solve a problem to make their intense emotions go away, start with validation instead to help them to tolerate those emotions and know they can get through them.
- Encourage your students to use effective calming strategies that work for them, in addition to healthy activities such as going for walks, reaching out to friends, and being active.

On the next page there is an activity that you can share with your students to help them plan ahead and create a self-soothe kit that they can use to tolerate intense emotions.

Activity

Practicing these skills helps you to increase awareness of thoughts, feelings, and behaviors to improve your mental health and wellness.

Self-Soothe Kit

You can use your five senses to self-soothe and help tolerate intense emotions. Use the guide below to create your own self-soothe kit.

You can carry this self-soothe kit with you so you always have what you need to tolerate intense feelings.
